TESTIMONY OF BLOODHOUNDS.

As in the Case of Other Sleuths, Their

Powers Are Often Overrated

In the sensational murder case at Lorain. O.

suspicion appears to have fallen upon Father Walser mainly on account of the action of the bloodhounds which were brought to the scene of the murder. Of course, there is the additional circumstance that Father Walser was in the house and had a chance to commit the crime, but that is an extremely slight ground of sus-

The bloodhound is, in one respect, very like the human detective. Romance has been busy legions of old sleuths has been illustrated in fiction, from the pages of Dickens and Conan

Doyle to those of thousands of dime novels.

This has produced in the minds of the people a confidence in the wonderful skill of detectives in action. There have been great detectives and there have been great detectives' feats, but they are far less numerous than is generally believed.

In like manner the bloodhound has been ex-

Yet there are still people who are willing to re-gard their own inferences from the bloodhound's behavior as sufficient to exclude all reasonable

The trouble about the bloodhound as a witness is that he cannot be sworn. His testimony therefore, is not to be received in court. As he is not a competent witness it is also not competent to prove by other witnesses the nature of the information which he furnishes or is supposed to furnish. An attempt to cross-examine him is attended with too great difficulties. His services as a detective, therefore, are subject to

For all that, he is sometimes useful. But his usefulness is mainly in the way of affording a clew to the human detectives. When he actually traces the perpetrator of a crime to his hiding place it is often possible to find on the person or in the residence of the person suspected evi-dences that he had committed a crime. At all events, in this way attention is sometimes directed to the proper person. But the chances of mistake are very great, and it is important that the limitations of the bloodhound should be bet-

In the week just ended trade in most lines was very satisfactory. The rains have not been so heavy in this territory as to make the country roads deep with mud. Showers have been frequent, but soon dried off with the coming out of the sun, and conditions in that respect have not been as unfavorable as would have been the case had the rains been heavier. There is a good feeling in all markets and a disposition shown to carry large stocks, as money in the country tributary to this market seems in good supply and the people so prosperous that they enjoy spending it. This is demonstrated in the large demand for dry goods. Wholesale houses sold more dry goods during the first six days of June than in any like period in their history. The same remark will apply to groceries. There is a good demand for sugars, coffees and fancy groceries. The provision market is very active. Prices tend downward, but there is still room for a decline, as with the high price for fresh meats hog products have been advanced to higher figures than were ever before known. Flour is steady at the advanced quotations of Saturday. Mills re-

The supply of poultry just about equals the demand. Leather dealers report their trade as excellent. Seldom do they have a better week than the one just past. Iron and hardware dealers had a very busy week, and June, like May, promises to be a record-breaker in volume of trade. In fact, all lines of trade are at a high standard, and traveling salesmen who came in on Friday night and Saturday report the outlook for trade, despite the rain, unusually good. Indianapolis Grain Market.

The receipts of grain at the railroad stations during the past week have been heavier than in any week for some months, many of the furmers taking advantage of the wet weather to dispose of their corn. Receipts of hogs at the stockyards the past week have been large beyond precedent for June, and it is believed that much of the poor corn is being fed to hogs at the present time; but dealers say there is plenty of good corn in the country yet to be sold, and heavier shipments are looked for from now on. QUEER ELEPHANT HUNT.

How the Natives Get Big Game on the White Nile.

London Graphic.

Bordering the White Nile, some 300 miles south of Khartoum and extending some 200 miles farther south to near Fashoda, is as fine a big game country as is to be found in Africa. The following species abound on either bank of the river: Elephant, giraffe, buffalo, lion, leopard, cheetah, sewal, roan antelope, waterbuck, tora hartebeest, bastard hartebeest, white-eared cob. reedbuck, gazelle, ostrich, hippopotamus, wart-The pursuit of game in this district. as also in the rest of the Soudan, is closely restricted by the Soudan game laws, which are everywhere rigidly enforced. The killing of elephant and buffalo with large bore rifles. though doubtless exciting sport, does not com-Baggara Arabs, who hunt them on horseback armed only with their broad-headed spears. In this sport the white man is practically precluded from taking an active part, owing to the nature of the bush and cotton soil. Their plan is as follows: Parties of from four to ten men, riding about nine to ten stone, mounted on thirteenhand Abyssinian ponies, price thirty to forty sheep (i. e., £3 to £4, for the price of sheep here average about 2s), accompanied by their women and donkeys, encamp near some spot known to be the drinking place of the elephants. These, and pass the interim some twenty miles or more in dense and waterless jungle. The hunters, having settled their camp on the river, leave their women in charge and themselves sleep the night some eight or ten miles inland and to lee-however, only drink about every third night, ward of the numerous elephant tracks leading to If in luck they will probably hear the herd trumpeting during the night, and in any case, at the first streak of dawn, every man will be in the saddle, and they at once proceed to draw wind for fresh spoor. It may be here remarked their toilet is not extensive, their hunting kit little more than nature gave them, as practically all clothes are dispensed with in order to facilitate passage through the holding "waita-bit" or "kitr" bush. Occasionally the elephants are met returning leisurely from their ibations, which simplifies matters considerably, but more often they have compassed the ten miles from the river, and by dawn are well on their way to their home in the thickest bush, as a rule at least twenty miles from the river. If the latter be the case, on hitting off th spoor the Arabs at once dash off with wild hoorooshes in headlong pursuit along the plainly visible track, and continue with top speed, with here and there a momentary check, regardless of all obstacles, such as fallen trees, branches deep baked elephant tracks, bulfinches of "wait a-bit" bush, and the worst of cotton soil, until they come up to the herd or "mark them to ground." after perhaps a ten-mile point in the impenetrable kitr bush, which serves as a sanctuary for them. On nearing the elephants the cows often turn and challenge their pursuers before being actually molested; however in any case a battle royal is shortly begun. The Arabs, one by one, thrusting dexterously with their keen, broad-bladed spears at the hind-quarters of the selected elephant, are each in turn pursued, but only to return and renew the attack afresh. Eventually the mighty pachyderm subsides, weak from the loss of blood fr many a wound, and is then at the mercy of his wildly vociferating assailants. Now and again a fall at a critical moment leaves an Arab an easy victim to the infuriated beast; but so nimble are these hard and wiry men that fatal or even serious accidents are rare. On the fall of the elephant messengers are at once dispatched to the camp on the Nile, now, perhaps, miles distant, to inform the women, who hastily collect all available donkeys and waterskins, and forthwith set out for the scene of the kill to bring home the meat and the much-prized hide and ivory. The ponies meanwhile have probably been without water since the previous after-noon, and will now have a long jog back to the river, which they may possibly reach about 2 p. m., by which time the temperature will be 110 degrees than 100 degrees in the Buffalo sticking is carried out on similar lines, but is less severe on the ponies, as they seldom travel more than four or five miles from the river. Giraffe also afford the Arabs excel lent and less dangerous sport, and their hide makes the best of sandals and shields. Such was the training ground of the devoted cavalry

CATTLE IN SCANT SUPPLY, SELLING AT PREVIOUS PRICES.

Hogs in Fair Demand and Ten Cents Lower-Sheep Quiet-Condition of Markets Elsewhere.

6.-Cattle-Receipts, 150; shipments none. The receipts of cattle this week indicate an increase of nearly 500 over last week, but a decrease of about 1,600 compared with the same week a year ago, and 400 compared with the corresponding time two years ago. Thus far this year the receipts are nearly 1,100 smaller than the same time last year, and for the month thus far there is an increase of nearly 1,000 compared with the same period a year ago. The market this week has been very satisfactory from the sellers' point of view when compared with other places. The receipts were larger than last week, while the general market showed a decrease. The quality has been reasonably satisfactory, notwithstanding a small percentage of the supply was good enough to sell around top prices. Local packing houses gave the market much better support than last week, while the outside demand decreased about 50 per cent. The conditions at the beginning of the week were very strong, and on Tuesday sellers experienced one of the best markets for some time past, sales of fat cattle, in a general way, being fully 10c to 15c higher. This stimulated the marketing, and later in the week, with the supply fully equal to the demand, most of the early gain in prices was lost There was a good active trade at current prices, however, and salesmen were very well satisfied with the result obtained. At the extreme close of the week values were, if any different, a shade better than at the close of last week, which, of course, indicated a healthy condition. Just what will develop in the near future cannot be foretold, but it is hardly advisable for shippers to expect too much of the market, and it is also necessary that they be very cautious in making their selections in the country, and, if possible, try to raise their consignments to a higher standard of quality and fat. It will be observed that the tidy light cattle in all departments are selling to better advantage now than heavier grades. The market for feeding cattle this week has been about stationary. On account of the relatively high prices prevailing it has not been easy to consummate sales, but it does not appear that any concessions in prices have been made. The highest sales this week were $5.15 for fat steers, $4.85 for feeders, $4.85 for heifers, $4.25 for cows, $4 for bulls and $6.75 for calves. About the average Saturday run of cattle was received to-day. and, as usual at this time in the week, there were not enough in all lines to establish a range in prices. There was a steady demand from local sources, and sales for the most part were reported steady compared with yesterday. Quo-

 ...... ....... Hogs-Receipts, 5,500; shipments, 1,500. The receipts of hogs this week show an increase of 5,000 over last week, nearly 7,000 over the same week a year ago, and almost 6,500 over the corresponding week two years ago. Thus far this year the receipts are over 33,000 larger than the same time last year, and for the month thus far there is a gain of over 9,000 compared with the same period last year. For the week ending yes-terday the leading local packers bought a total of 28,950, against 29,311 the preceding week, and 26,718 the same week a year ago. During the same period the shipments were 6,330, against 5,674 the preceding week, and 3,411 the corresponding week a year ago. The market this week has been characterized by receipts in excess of the season's average and unusual changes in prices. The fact that the supplies here were there was very strong competition between all buyers, and prices rapidly advanced 15c to 20c per 100 lbs. This was followed by excessive reeipts, and the day of reckoning for buyers came. The market was also affected by quite a falling off in the demand from outside sources brough about by the low prices prevailing in Eastern markets. On Wednesday there was a decline of from 5c to 15c, followed by almost a steady mar-ket on Thursday, but the last two days of the week prices have suffered an average loss about 30c. At the extreme close of the week therefore, the average was in the neighborhoo of 40c lower than on Tuesday, and right at 20c lower than the close of last week. Local packers have been very free buyers at the decline in prices, and it was possible to make good clearances each day. While there were not a great many hogs in their class good enough to bring extreme prices, the quality has been generally satisfactory, and the average weight continue heavier than usual at this time in the year. The highest price of the week was $6.37%, and the lowest top price $6. At the extreme close of the week prices were at the lowest point of the year, and the top price was the lowest since Nov. 27, 1901. The traders are not inclined to make any predictions for the future, but it is argued by some that a sharp reaction in prices will have a tendency to check the receipts, and in that event it is probable that there will be no further change in prices for a few days. It seems evident, however, that the marketable supply of hogs in the country is large, and any permanent nprovement in prices will be rather a surprise The receipts to-day were fully 2,000 larger than a week ago, and almost 4.000 larger than a year ago. The market opened with packers again bidding decidedly lower prices, and, in fact, so much lower that salesmen were not inclined to consider their offers seriously. Not many were transferred right at the start, therefore, but later a fair shipping demand developed, which caused packers to change their views to some extent and finally the offerings were moving toward the scales at an average reduction of about 10c in prices compared with vesterday. There was no really urgent demand, however, at any time during the day, and the market did not develo much life. At the close of trade it was admitted that a few scratch sales were probably only lower, and all agreed that an average decline of 10c for the day would be a conservative estimate A satisfactory clearance was made at the decline. The extreme range in sales to-day was from $5.50 to $6, and the bulk of the supply sold at $5.70@5.90. Quotations: Good to choice medium to heavy......$5.8066.00 Mixed and heavy packing.... PEOPLE WITH TEMPERS.

They Make Life Very Unpleasant for Their Associates. New York Mail and Express.

"I have never been anything better than yellow dog in my own house," remarked a husband whose domestic woes got into court. The only fault with his wife, he said, was "her temper." The casual phrase has the picturesqueness and fine appropriateness of vision. The man or woman who has a thoroughly ill-natured spouse or is thrown into constant and intimate interlarger, while in the general market they were smaller, is probably a credit to this market, but a dog's life—a yellow dog's life. Other dogs the selling interests have suffered on account of may suffer a martyrdom that is not without a sharp reaction in values. The changes in either dignity, but the yellow dog is despised as well direction have been very decided, but at that as persecuted. His sufferings are mitigated by values have been satisfactory when compared no balm of self-respect. In putting up with inand more or less dear to him a man is cutting a sorry figure in his own eyes as well as in the eyes of others. There must be another "Taming of the Shrew" if he would rehabilitate himself. The plain old English phrase, "a bad dispos-tion." is the fittest to describe a violent tempe There is a touch of congenital badness about it, scmething akin to intermittent alcoholism periodic vice. Even where it discharges itself in printable and fairly decorous language, it carries with it the ugly meanings and associations of the barrooms and the stews. It is not uncom however, when the barriers of restraint are broken down, for it to have frank recourse to their forms of expression. So a man or a woman who on minor provocation rips out with injurious violence and derogatory epithets, is in somewhat the same predicament as one who is yoked with a fellow whose past is not without reproach, who has to be "allowed for" with one's self and silently apologized for to others. It is a species of

There are those who pride themselves on the possession of what is called "a fine old temper." They are uncommonly easily pleased. "Ill" nature and "bad" temper—the words exist as embodiments of the deliberate experience of mankind. They stand as opinions of something morbid and something vile. The institution o the ducking stool for scolds, male and female, embodies another hearty judgment, which was not abandoned when society abdicated the task of evicting the evil one by forcible immersion and allowing the ducking stool to fall into disuse. Its raison d'etre was the belief that crossness was just a form of perverse egotism, a sort of childishness, of immaturity and exaggerated self-love, that could be cured by a course of "A contentious woman and a rainy day are alike"-and a contentious man is not far different. One cannot avoid rainy days, but there is nothing inevitable about contention.

A "Literary" Tale.

Philadelphia Press.

One of the number of well-known American literary men who have beautiful country homes of their own is Mr. Richard Watson Gilder, poet and editor. He has sung the charms of his rustic retreat, "Lyringham," near Lenox, Mass., in two of his poems and so loyal is he in his appreciation of it that a very neat little story is told of him in literary circles of New York. It is well known that the late Frank R Stockton was an enthusiast over his Southern country home, taking the same pro-found interest in details of farm life as Stevenson, who cheerfully and at any time would leave half written on his desk the pages of what he contemptuously stigmatized as "the rotten end of a rancid nursery yarn" to go dig roads out of the primeval mud of Vailima.

With all an author-farmer's pride, Mr Stockton wrote to Mr. Gilder, soon after be-coming settled in his rural residence, describing his dairy, equipped with an up-todate separator. "We have," declared the creator of "Pomona," "enough water power on the place to keep this in active operation and separate the cream from the milk." "That's nothing," Mr. Gilder is reported to have written back, undismayed: "On our place we have so much water power that it goes through the plumbing in the house and in cold weather bursts the pipes and separates the lath from the plaster."
